Mowgli learnt from him how to listen and observe. He recognized the rustle in the grass, the breath of the night air, he heard every note of the owls, every scratch of a bat's claws and every flash of little fish jumping in the river. All this was very important to Mowgli if he was to survive in the jungle. When he was not learning, he sat out in the sun and slept and ate and went to sleep again. When he felt dirty or hot, he swam in the forest pool and when he wanted honey or nuts he climbed up the trees for them.

He played and made friends with almost all the animals in the jungle. Mowgli grew to be strong and agile. He could swim well, run fast, climb all trees and swing from branch to branch. Baloo, an old bear, taught him the laws of the jungle. He was delighted to have such a clever pupil.
